

THE GLOBAL IMPACT AND LEGACY OF TRUTH COMMISSIONS

SERIES ON TRANSITIONAL JUSTICE

The Series on Transitional Justice offers a platform for high-quality research within the rapidly growing field of transitional justice. The research is, of necessity inter-disciplinary in nature, drawing from disciplines such as law, political science, history, sociology, criminology, anthropology and psychology, as well as from various specialised fields of study such as human rights, victimology and peace studies. Furthermore, the research is international in outlook, drawing on the knowledge and experience of academics and other specialists in many different regions of the world.

The series is aimed at a variety of audiences who are either working or interested in fields such as crime and justice; human rights; humanitarian law and human security; conflict resolution and peace building. These audiences include academics, researchers, students, policy makers, practitioners, non-governmental organisations and the media.

All books published within the series are subject to a double-blind peer review by recognised authorities in the field.

The General Editors of the Series are:

- Prof. Stephan Parmentier (Catholic University of Leuven, Belgium)
- Prof. Jeremy Sarkin (University of South Africa)
- Prof. Elmar Weitekamp (University of Tübingen, Germany)
- Mina Rauschenbach (Université de Lausanne and University of Leuven) (Associate Editor)

The general editors receive the support from an Editorial Committee and an Advisory Board, consisting of internationally renowned academics and practitioners.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

This volume is the culmination of a process that began with a conference at NOVA University Lisbon, Portugal, in February 2018, when all the authors came together around the themes of the book. Draft chapters were presented. Chapters were then finalised and an internal review process occurred, to which all authors of the book and the editor contributed. A language review of the chapters was also carried out. Later, all the chapters were sent for double blind review by the editor of the TJ Series, after which the chapters were finalised.

There are many to thank for their assistance in this process. NOVA University assisted with support for the conference and the book. At the Law School, the research centre CEDIS and the organisation Jurisnova were very helpful in various ways. The funding agency FCT in Portugal assisted with funding.

Professor Chandra Sriram, who attended the conference and was involved in the book, passed away during the year. She was a major voice on transitional justice and her contributions to the field were very significant.

Her research focuses on issues pertaining to peace and conflict, violence, gender and transitional justice, and she has co-edited volumes on Gender in Transitional Justice (Palgrave, 2012), Transitional Justice Theories (Routledge, 2014), Memorials in Times of Transition (Intersentia, 2014), Spatializing Peace and Conflict (Palgrave, 2016), Gender, Violence, Refugees (Berghan, 2017) and Perpetrators and Perpetration of Mass Violence (Routledge, 2018).

Erin Daly is Professor of Law at Delaware Law School and Co-Director of the Dignity Rights Project. She is the co-author, with Jeremy Sarkin, of Reconciliation in Divided Societies: Finding Common Ground (U. Penn, 2006, 2010) and the author of Dignity Rights: Courts, Constitutions, and the Worth of the Human Person (U. Penn, 2013). She is the co-editor, with James R. May, of Encyclopedia of Human Rights and the Environment: Indivisibility, Dignity and Legality (forthcoming, Edward Elgar) and many other books on environmental constitutionalism. She serves as the Director of the Global Network for Human Rights and the Environment, and as the US National Correspondent for the Centre international de droit comparé de l'environnement (CIDCE). She has served as the Vice President for Institutional Development at the Université de la Fondation Aristide in Haiti.

Anita Ferrara is a lecturer in Human Rights Law at the Irish Centre for Human Rights, National University of Ireland, Galway. She completed her PhD in Law at the School of Oriental and African Studies (SOAS), University of London, in 2012. She previously taught at SOAS on justice and reconciliation in post-conflict societies. Before her academic career, Anita worked for United Nations Agencies and NGOs in the field of human rights. She worked at the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights in Santiago, Chile and at the United Nations Development Programme in Gaborone, Botswana. Her research interests include transitional justice, human rights, the impact and legacy of truth commissions, and memory and law, with a particular focus on the Latin American region.

Pádraig McAuliffe is a graduate of University College Cork (BCL and PhD). After a brief period in the Legal Division of the Irish Department of Foreign Affairs, he became a lecturer at the University of Dundee in 2009. He became a Senior Lecturer in the School of Law and Social Justice at the University of Liverpool in 2013 and has been Associate Head of the Law School since 2017. He is the author of two books, Transitional Justice and Rule of Law Reconstruction: A Contentious Relationship (Routledge, 2013) and Transformative Transitional Justice and the Malleability of Post-Conflict States (Edward Elgar, 2017). His interests include transitional justice, the historic institutionalism of socio-economic rights and justice sector reform.

Brianne McGonigle Leyh is an Associate Professor at Utrecht University, Netherlands Institute of Human Rights. Her expertise includes human rights, rule of law, victims' rights and transitional justice. She also currently acts as Senior Counsel for the Public International Law & Policy Group and serves on the Advisory Board of the Netherlands Helsinki Committee. Previously she worked as Co-Counsel, Civil Party Lawyer at the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia (ECCC). She won the International Association of Penal Law (AIDP), American Branch, Book of the Year Award in 2013. She has also been selected as a member of the Utrecht Young Academy. She received her PhD in law from Utrecht University, her Juris Doctorate, cum laude, and Master of Arts in International Relations from American University, and her Bachelor of Arts, cum laude, in the University Professors Program at Boston University.

Luke Moffett is a senior law lecturer at Queen's University Belfast, Northern Ireland. He previously worked as a research fellow on the Arts and Humanities Research Council (AHRC) funded project 'Amnesties, Prosecution and the Public Interest in the Northern Ireland Transition.' His PhD examined the role of victims within the International Criminal Court and their ability to participate and claim reparations. His book 'Justice for Victims before the International Criminal Court' was published in 2014. He is the co-editor of the Research Handbook of Transitional Justice (Edward Elgar, 2017). He is currently Principal Investigator on the AHRC funded 'Reparations, Responsibility and Victimhood in Transitional Societies' project in six jurisdictions, which explores victim identity and responsibility in reparation mechanisms and the obligations of non-state actors.

Joana Rebelo Morais is a PhD student of Comparative Politics at the Institute of Social Sciences, University of Lisbon. She holds an MA in Political Science from ISCTE-IUL. Her Master's thesis was entitled 'The Commission of the Black Book on the Fascist Regime: In Search of the Truth?' ('A Comissão do Livro Negro sobre o Regime Fascista: Em busca da verdade?'). It received an Honorary Mention in the 19th edition of the Mário Soares Foundation – EDP Foundation Award in 2017. Her research interests include democratisations, founding elections and truth commissions.

Filipa Raimundo is a research fellow at the Institute of Social Sciences, University of Lisbon, and Guest Assistant Professor in the Department of Political Science and Public Policy at ISCTE-IUL, Lisbon. She holds a PhD in Political and Social Sciences from the European University Institute, Florence. Her PhD dissertation on ‘Post-Transitional Justice: Spain, Portugal and Poland Compared’ received an Honorary Mention in the 2014 edition of the Portuguese Political Science Association PhD Dissertation Award. Her interests include democratisation, transitional justice, authoritarian legacies and political attitudes. Her research work has been published by journals such as Democratization, South European Society and Politics, and Mediterranean Politics, and in edited volumes by Palgrave/Macmillan and Columbia University Press.

Jeremy Sarkin is Distinguished Visiting Professor of Law at NOVA University Lisbon, Portugal. He has undergraduate and postgraduate law degrees from South Africa, a Master of Laws degree from Harvard Law School and a Doctor of Laws degree on comparative and international law. He is admitted to practice as attorney in the USA and South Africa. He was a member (2008–2014), and Chairperson-Rapporteur (2009–2012), of the United Nations Working Group on Enforced or Involuntary Disappearances. He served as an acting judge in 2002 and 2003 in the High Court in South Africa. He has published 17 books and more than 300 articles and book chapters. He is a member of a number of journal editorial boards and serves on the boards of a number of NGOs. He regularly assists the United Nations, the European Union, African institutions and others on constitutional, human rights and transitional justice issues.

Elin Skaar is a political scientist and senior researcher at the Chr. Michelsen Institute (CMI) in Bergen, Norway. Exploring the intersections between law and politics in Latin America and Africa, her research interests include human rights, transitional justice, and judicial reform. Currently, her main research focus is on Latin American truth commissions. She has for three decades published widely on democratisation processes and human rights. Her publications include Judicial Independence and Human Rights in Latin America: Violations, Politics, and Prosecution (Palgrave Macmillan, 2011), After Violence: Transitional Justice, Peace, and Democracy (Routledge, 2015, co-authored), and Transitional Justice in Latin America: The Uneven Road from Impunity towards Accountability (Routledge, 2016, co-edited). She holds a PhD in political science from the University of California, Los Angeles.

Eric Wiebelhaus-Brahm is Associate Professor of Political Science and Coordinator of the Middle Eastern Studies Program at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock. His research agenda focuses on transitional justice, human rights, post-conflict reconstruction, and democratisation. He critically examines the empirical and normative arguments used to justify the introduction of social and economic policies in societies emerging from periods of conflict and repression. Much of his work has focused on using social science research methods to evaluate transitional justice mechanisms. His research is driven by a normative desire to set more realistic policy expectations, particularly among victims and marginalised groups. He is the author of Truth Commissions and Transitional Societies (Routledge, 2010), as well as 11 book chapters and 17 peer-reviewed articles.
